A Remonstrance. Editors Dispatch : The object of increasing the State revenues in the bill presented by Mr. Williams before the Legislature may be highly commendable, but the ways and means he has chosen to effect it seem rather unfortunate. To shift the burden of taxation from the common necessaries to the luxurles of life is a "consummation devoutly to be wished." Imperfection is inseparable from any scheme of taxation that can be devised. The Court of Appeals Secides that the Legislature has a discretionary power in selecting the subjects of taxation as well as the pressure it shall bear on classes and interests to be exercised as nearly as possible in conformity to the State Constitution. Money, property, and business are the prime subjects of taxation.

What an unheard-of proposition it is to tax a man's habits, and his bad habits at that? What a brilliant weparture from the legitimate sources of revenue to tax a minor who is not recognized in law as a citizen. who is not recognized in law as a citizen! vertisement. Apply at Piedmont and Arlingto if the discretion of the Government can ex- Life Insurance Company's office. fe 15-1th tend in this direction, where shall it end? In the "Scarlet Letters" and Blue Lauce of Massachusetts! Tax away per capita two or five dollars, as the case may be, but hands off the sugar dish. Let no man tax my private habits, with which Government has nothing to'do. It would be beneath its dignity to attempt any invasion of my personal liberty, affixing a stigma to my name on its books of revenue, and with a detestable system of espionage, make me the sport of withings abroad or of friends at home. The bill is intoned with a moral purpose that belongs to the influence of the church and the customs of society to accomplish. Introduce no such irritating element into our revenue laws, which pinch us bard enough already, and which would be adding insult to injury. A.S.

Our correspondent writes well; but he should remember that Mr. WELLIAMS has already said in a published letter that he did not introduce his bill with the expectation that it would be passed, nor as providing a good mode of taxation considered in itself, 'b it as better than one taxing industry, commerce, &c.

A Virginian Ham on the Virginia Ham. From the Norfolk Virginian, Ham. Chamber layne, editor.]

THE DISPATCH ON DIET. The Dispatch gives its readers a bomily of a column's length on "bacon," as we Virginians reapt to say when we mean " hams." It is a subject traditionally dear to the Virginian, and the Dispatch's article was doubtless received thankfully, and not least so in that part of it in which our learned Theban sketches in quite idyllic strain the life of the Virginian hog from his infancy, with adversity for his rough step-mother, through his furtive youth, much bedevilled of dogs, to his sumptuous prime in the golden autumn of his full-fed term, when acorns and apples, persimmons, and, it may be, the pumpkin and the nubbin-dearest of all to himmake for him a short-lived feast while the sacrificial knife sharpens for his throat, what time the bob-white whistles in the crab grass, and the "molly cotton" whisks along the frosted pathway or nibbles, comfident, in the neglected garden, and the bluebird sounds a melancholy note of parting from the top of the apple tree that furnished his hollow

The virtues of the bog, so nurtured as the Dispatch figures bim, would charm a Spartan. "Hardy, brave, and intrepid." Note that iteration, "brave and intrepid." How the writer lingers on his virtues and double them, as it were, in the enumeration. Then with what artful contrast doth our Encyclopædic friend set in opposition to our free denizen of the fields, to our child of nature and triumph over unkind fortune, to our "land shark" and "razor back," the bideous product, the "monstrosity of fatness," that disgraces the sty of the Chester, or is forced, as the Poland-China glutton, to "scrofulous outcroppings and asthmatic wheezings." With what poetic horror doth he refuse more than to bint at the awful fact that elsewhere than in Wirginia the bog is "killed and cured by steam." Then with what relish be tells of the ham, which to offer unto mankind our grunting hero "lives his life in a golden latitude and bequeaths his body to the charming feasts."

Surely here is come at once a Maro to sing and an Apicius to savor the Wirginian hog. Republican Rome nor iron Sparta itself never trampled with sterner foot on luxury and all its ills than doth this Cato of the Dispatch on the idle sty of the corn- and swill-devouring animal vainly said to be "improved," and surely ne Vitellius, no Claudius, ever sat down to feasts of peacocks' brains, night-ingales' tongues, or man-eating lampreys with more relish than attends this Barmecide feast of the Dispatch on "that cherished emblem of the most refined and golden hospitality the world has ever seen-the Old Virginia ham."

"Our gallant porker" verily hath met with a "gallant" poet, and if one were not the poet one might almost wish to be the porker thus to be sung in Epithalamium. [Which moves us to say that the commentator excels the author!

A REMARKABLE WAGER AND ITS SINGULAR RESULTS .- [From the Troy (N. Y., Times.] -Some years ago J. W. Serviss, of Amster dam, and David Manny, of the Manny House in order to play a joke on Stephen Arnold, of the Arnold House, both of that place. went to him and said that they had bet drinks on a certain question in dispute, and that they desired him to act as referee, the drinks to be paid for when the bet was decided. Mr. Arnold accepted the teams, and drinks to the amount of $2.50 were disposed of. Serviss then said he bad bet Manny the drinks for the entire party at Acnold's that when the spire of the new Catholic cathedral fell, it would fall to the west; while Manny had bet that it would fall to the east. Of course the laugh was upon Arnold. He looked puzzled for a moment, then quietly producing a book, he carefully noted down the terms of the bet. During the gale of last week the spire of that cathedral fell. It fell to the east. Tidings of the fact reached Arnold, who drew on his Elster as if he bad been greased, drove up to his house as rapidly as possible, produced the book in which be had recorded the bet, and almost before Mr. Serviss had heard of the fall of the spire he was presented with a bill of $2 50 worth of drinks, with seven years' interest added, Bald Mountain is beginning to be agitated again. The Ashville Expositor, the official organ of old Baldy, says since the earthquake in Virginia, which shook the Richmond Dispatch so violently, the North Carolina volcano has been heard to exclaim, Competition is the life of trade."

Rev. Dr. Lorimer, of Boston, recited "Beautiful Snow" from his pulpit Sunday, and there was no rush for the doors.

This establishment, before going into bankruptcy,—which was caused only for want of capital, being unable to meet their payments on the larke purchases of the machinery therein—was commanding a very extensive and lucrative business, owing to the large num ber of tobacco factories, insurance companies, and banks in Hichmond and neighboring cities creating a large and increasing demand for lithographic work. A favorable opportunity is thereby afforded to any who may desire to establish themselves in a successful lithographic business commanding the southern trade.

All articles formerly belonging to C. C. Ludwig will be sold jointly by assignee, and trustee. The balance will be sold by assignee.

The regravings on the lithographic stones are very valuable, having originally cost from $5 to $250 each. commencing at 11 o'clock. $250 each. TERMS: Under $100 cach, over $100 one fourth cash; balance in two, four, and six months, with negotiable notes satisfactorily endorsed.
